Leland Bowen House
4280 Hunting Creek Road
Huntingtown, Calvert County
ca. 1900
Private

Erected at the turn of the twentieth century, the Leland Bowen House at 4280 Hunting Creek Road in Huntingtown is exemplary of rural vernacular housing constructed throughout Calvert County, specifically the I-house form. The property includes a number of historic agricultural outbuildings that illustrate the cultivation of tobacco and associated lifestyle of Calvert County residents during the late nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

This two-story dwelling presents an I-house form, with a three-bay-wide façade, side-passage entry, and single-pile interior plan. Indicative of the form, a one-and-a-half-story ell projects from the north elevation. A one-story addition was added to the north elevation of the ell and a one-story addition has been constructed on the east side elevation of the main block. A shed-roofed carport was added to the northeast corner of the structure. Constructed of wood frame, the main block of the structure rests on brick piers infilled with concrete blocks. The house has been clad in aluminum siding. The steeply pitched side gable roof is dominated by front gables on the façade and north elevation. The roof is clad with a pressed metal roof with a fish-scale pattern. The first story of the façade is largely obscured by a one-story screened porch. The porch, supported by square wood posts, has a half-hipped roof clad with pressed metal roof with a fish-scale pattern. The window openings have 1/1 metal sash with aluminum surrounds and louvered shutters.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

SETTING

The Leland Bowen House at 4280 Hunting Creek Road is located on the north side of the road, just west of Huntingtown. The property, noted as Lot 2, consists of 1.07 acres. The house is set on a flat grassy lot with mature trees and boxwood surrounding. The agricultural buildings, located to the north of the house, include a tobacco barn, two wood-frame drying houses, a concrete-block chicken house, and concrete-block garage.

PRIMARY RESOURCE

This two-story dwelling presents an I-house form, with a three-bay-wide façade, side-passage entry, and single-pile interior plan. Indicative of the form, a one-and-a-half-story ell projects from the north elevation. A one-story addition was added to the north elevation of the ell and a one-story addition has been constructed on the east side elevation of the main block. A shed-roofed carport was added to the northeast corner of the structure. Constructed of wood frame, the main block of the structure rests on brick piers infilled with concrete blocks. The house has been clad in aluminum siding. The steeply pitched side gable roof is dominated by front gables on the façade and north elevation. The roof is clad with a pressed metal roof with a fish-scale pattern. The first story of the façade is largely obscured by a one-story screened porch. The porch, supported by square wood posts, has a half-hipped roof clad with pressed metal roof with a fish-scale pattern. The window openings have 1/1 metal sash with aluminum surrounds and louvered shutters.

SECONDARY RESOURCES

The agricultural buildings, located to the north of the house, include a tobacco barn, two wood-frame drying houses, a concrete-block chicken house, and concrete-block garage. The historic tobacco barn, dating from the first decades of the twentieth century, is located approximately fifty yards to the north-northeast of the house. It is a side-gable structure that rests upon a concrete-block foundation, with a standing-seam metal roof. It is clad with vertical wood boards, some of which are vents that are hinged at the top, and held closed with wood rotating stays. There is a shed addition on the southern side of the barn, with two symmetrical bays that have two-leaf vertical wood board doors. On the northern side of the barn, there is a shed-roofed concrete-block addition. Two historic wood-frame drying houses, dating from the first decades of the twentieth century, sit side-by-side to the north-northwest of the house. They sit on concrete-block piers, have front-gable roofs covered with sheets of corrugated metal, and are clad with vertical wood board siding. The westernmost shed has an open vehicle bay with a poured concrete floor. The one-story concrete-block chicken house, dating from the mid-twentieth century and presently in a state of deterioration, has a shed roof with asphalt shingles and exposed rafter ends. The window openings have 6/6 wood-sash with square-edged surrounds. The two single-leaf doors open back to back, suggesting the interior is divided into two rooms. Each entry opening has a vertical board door of wood. The one-story garage, dating from the middle part of the twentieth century, is constructed of concrete block and has a shed roof of asphalt shingles. The three-bay garage has a concrete floor and storage at the rear. The separate exterior entry to the storage has a double-leaf vertical board door of wood.

A concrete-block shed and garage dating from the middle of the twentieth century sit to the north of the house. They both have shed roofs sheathed in asphalt shingles. The garage is a one-story, three-bay structure with a wood box cornice, and two open vehicle bays. The third bay has hanging, sliding metal doors. The bays have poured concrete floors. The one-story, three-bay shed has two 6/6 wood sash windows, exposed roof rafters, overhanging eaves, and side-by-side vertical wood board doors. The doors open in opposing directions.

This house faces south onto Huntingtown Road. It is a two-story framed and weatherboarded structure set on a brick foundation. It has a three-bay facade and a side-passage-parlor plan. The gable roof is intersected by a front-facing gable. There is an interior brick stove flue. The double-hung sash have single large panes. There is a one-story hipped-roof screened-in porch, two one-story additions to the rear, and a one-story wing added to the east side. Behind the house are two small framed and vertical-boarded outbuildings -- probably granaries. Their gable ends face south. Ranging in a row toward the north are three framed and vertical-boarded barns, all oriented with gable ends to the east.
